Carbon steel is preferred for heavy usage because it is thicker (0.20mm) and a little stronger, but the blades generally rust quickly, so they are really only good for one day's use.

Stainless steel blades are far more resistant to rust and more flexible (0.15mm), but are not quite as sharp. If you only scrape occasionally, the stainless steel is the way to go. We now offer in both packs of 10 (Green) and packs of 25 (Black) blades.

We now carry a thicker (0.20mm) stainless steel blade which is both stronger and more resistant to chipping, available in a Red pack of 25 blades.

Used Huck Towels

#1 Towel Used By Professionals

We purchase the highest and most expensive grade of blue towel available.

Step 1: We hand-sort every towel. Some towels have holes, stains, rough textures, or other blemishes. These rejects are removed, but available for sale at a discount.

Step 2: Towels are weighed. We use true weight. The weight of the box and packaging is not included. When you order 5 lbs of towels, you get 5 lbs of towels.

Step 3: Towels are packaged into their various weights. Pictured above is a 5 lb bag.

Step 4: We move them to the pick/pull area and ship them to you! We have thousands of pounds in-stock!

Bleached vs Unbleached

We order sea sponges by the thousands and, when possible, we order unbleached sponges. Most diving companies bleach their sponges lighter for the retail market because they look "prettier." This process weakens and shortens the life of sea sponges.

The most popular combination is 6' sections with a 4' center thrown in for good measure. Base sections are flared for added stability, and slip resistant material at bottom of the base comes standard. Remember to subtract 1' for each connection. For example: 4 6' sections = 4x6' - 3x1' = 21'

How To Select A WaterFed® Pole

Your main consideration when choosing a WaterFed® pole is working height. Your pole needs to be at least as tall as the tallest window you anticipate cleaning.

You should also consider these factors:

- Weight - Particularly with longer poles, weight makes a huge difference. The difference of a pound will be noticeable when you work with the pole all day. The lighter, the less fatigue you'll have.
- Flex - Some materials, like aluminum and fiberglass, bend more than others, like carbon fiber. A pole that flexes too much is difficult to control, especially for high windows.

High end poles are made of Carbon Fiber. Carbon Fiber is a necessity for high windows.

- Pros
 - Light
 - Stiff/Rigid
 - Less fatigue
- Cons
 - Higher Cost

Economy poles are made of aluminum or fiberglass.

- Pros
 - Less cost
- Cons
 - Heavy
 - More Fatigue
 - Flexible

Most poles are also available in hybrid, a blend of carbon fiber and fiberglass.

Telescopic vs. Modular vs. Combo

Also, consider whether a telescopic, modular, or combo pole is right for you.

Telescopic poles are versatile and can adjust to any length needed, but you are always carrying the full weight of the pole, even if you are doing low windows.

Modular poles add sections as needed, so that you only use what you need. However, adding and removing sections can be cumbersome, and you have to increase length at set intervals.

Combo poles are telescopic starters that can have additional sections added to the bottom.

How To Select A WaterFed® Cart

When selecting a cart, you need to consider how often you intend to use your cart, and the highest windows you anticipate cleaning.

	← low	FREQUENCY	high →
↑ high		ENTERPRISE
		NXT 4.0
↓ low	HEIGHT	NXT 1.0 NXT 2.0	PHASER VOYAGER NXT 3.0

Frequency of Use

There are two main types of systems: DI, and Multi-Stage. DI systems are like an inexpensive car with bad gas mileage. The up front cost is low, but it is more expensive per gallon. Multi-stage carts are like an expensive car with great gas mileage. Up front cost is high, but per gallon cost is low.

If you aren't going to use your cart often (twice a week or less), a DI system may make the most sense. If you plan to use your system regularly, a multi-stage system will have a lower cost of ownership overtime.

Height of Windows

If you are cleaning houses and rarely go higher than two stories, tap pressure is usually enough to get the job done. However, if you regularly do higher windows, or want increased flow for all of your work, you should get a system with a pump.

Certifications

Society for Professional Rope Access Technicians (SPRAT): Safe Practices for Rope Access Work recommends carabiners have a minimum strength of 22kN (5,000 lbs).

In the absence of more applicable rope access standards, ANSI Z359.1 is a standard related to fall protection that OSHA often uses. If you are not using ANSI Z359.1 compliant carabiners, be prepared to justify that choice to OSHA inspectors.

All About Harnesses Attachment Points

Front: Commonly used for attaching fall arrest during high rise cleaning. Allows for easier self-rescue.

Back: Commonly used for attaching fall arrest during high rise cleaning or other work at height (e.g. lifts).

Side: Used in specialty applications for positioning.

Ventral (waist): Commonly used for attachment to main line, especially in rope access where a chair isn't in use.

Note that some harnesses also have shoulder attachments. These are used for confined space applications and do not normally apply to high rise cleaning.

Choosing A Harness

Application: Consider what you will be using your harness for. If you are working on a roof or in a lift, you can get away with a simple fall protection harness (back D only). For high rise window cleaning and rope access, you'll want to get a comfortable harness with multiple attachment points.

Comfort: Spending a long time in the air can be uncomfortable, especially with a cheap harness. Nicer harnesses have more padding, making them more comfortable. If you spend much time in the air, you won't regret spending the money.

Ease of Donning: A harness made of webbing can be confusing to put on. It's difficult to tell which side is up, where your arms go, etc. Harnesses with more structure are easier to put on and adjust.

All About Rope Grabs

Regular

Locking mechanism can be defeated by user. User can hold onto device so that it fails to engage during fall.

Anti-Panic

Locking mechanism engages even if user panics and grabs device. Device can't be defeated by user.

Tended vs. Trailing vs. Self Parking

Tended devices must be manually moved up and down rope by user. Trailing devices follow user up and down rope with out being tended. Self Parking devices move up the rope automatically, but must be manually moved down the rope.

Certifications

ANSI establishes standards for rope grabs in industrial settings. Make sure your rope grabs are marked Z359.1 to meet the Fall Protection Code. Rope Grabs should come with a lanyard, or have a max lanyard length specified in the user instructions, and should always be used with rated, life-safety connectors.

Military Grade Ballistic Nylon // Strong Sticky Tabs Two Attachment Loops

Protect your rope from abrasion and cutting. This thick six-layer nylon protector actually fits around the rope like a sleeve, secured by a sticky tab to give stationary rope additional protection against rough and sharp edges. A loop at each end allows for a small cord to be attached if desired for additional positioning security. Protect your investment, protect your rope, protect yourself!

KMIII Max Black w/ Gold Tracer
Smoother Sheath // Better Abrasion Resistance

KMIII Max static rope is a balanced construction consisting of a continuous filament polyester twill pattern cover over a unidirectional nylon core. KMIII Max is designed to be more abrasion resistant, and to significantly reduce drag.

The polyester cover is very flexible, absorbs less water, has lower stretch, and is more abrasion resistant than the nylon covers found on some static ropes. The polyester cover and nylon core are balanced during manufacturing to attain the ultimate in performance.

New England Platinum 7/16"

Platinum rope is an innovative new technology that combines the core and the sheath of kernmantle rope. This eliminates issues such as the sheath bunching up or having no core left at the end of your rope. To avoid the sheath separating from the core, conventional kernmantle ropes have the sheath tightly woven around the core. This makes the rope much stiffer. Platinum rope is very pliable and easy to work with, since it doesn't require a tight sheath.
